And the students of Sweet Valley High get into a huge brawl with the students of Big Mesa High. In short, everyone has gone crazy. I did not enjoy this book. The book is too bizarre. It was written this way to force a change in the series, but it didn't work for me. In Sweet Valley High #95, The Morning After, Sam is dead. Jessica hates Liz, considering Sam's death to be completely Liz's fault; it's not like the drink that Jessica spiked had anything to do with Liz being drunk.

I read the Sweet Valley High books in a feverish rush in my tween years, tearing through the initial series after evening prep but before the bell for lights-out rang, and then waiting until it was safe to continue reading by flashlight, hidden by my pillow. I envied the twins' ability to assume each other's identity (how convenient!), and I enjoyed the petty sibling squabbles (my older ...
